

SELUXIT IN A NUTSHELL

IoT Improves the Bottom Line

Seluxit is dedicated to helping businesses markedly improve their bottom line through a holistic approach to the Internet of Things

What IoT can do for you

You may have heard that IoT can transform your business, that the Internet of Things can help you connect the dots, save resources, find new business models and optimize processes. That's all true, but it might sound like a mouthful. What does that actually mean?

To understand the impact of IoT on your business, replace "IoT" with "knowledge". If you had knowledge about your products, employees, assets, processes, and systems and the connections between them, you'd be able to use that knowledge to do everything you do better. For example, if you sell a product, you can make that product better, improving your customers' experience and learning from your product's patterns of use. If you're producing products, you can produce them better, anticipating, for example, when your production machines will need maintenance before they break down.

IoT lets you get a hold of untapped data and build knowledge. With that knowledge, you're empowered to solve problems that might have seemed daunting before, no matter what it is you do. IoT ultimately means improving your bottom line.

Why Seluxit

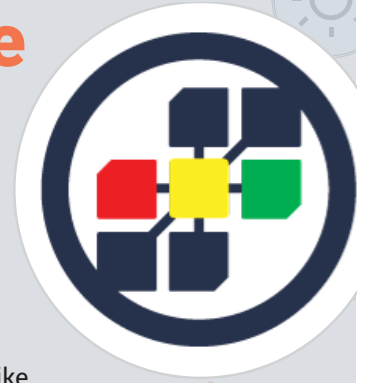

IoT is simpler than you think, if you work with the right company. We are experts in identifying IoT business opportunities as well as experts in making them a reality. We connect our customers products to the Internet in a safe, fast and seamless way and at the same time creating concrete value for our customers and their customers, based on data insight.

We excel at embedded hardware and firmware development, wireless protocols, cloud software, integrations, automations and app development. We work based on our own proven methods, that have been honed in the field for years. We use our own standardized modules so we can get our customers' products securely connected with a quick time-to-market.
